Summary of the Bishop's Charge

The Bishop began by welcoming the large number of delegates to the fifteenth Synod of the Diocese of Athabasca. He noted that since the last Synod was held Bishop Robins had resigned after nearly twenty years faithful service in the Canadian Church.

It was given to Bishop Robins to lead the Diocese in a transition period from an Indian Mission district to a great Agricultural area in Canada.

Canon James after six years' services at Grande Prairie, on account of ill health returned to Ireland with the good wishes of a host of friends.

Among the newcomers, on behalf of the Synod, the Bishop welcomed The Rev. W. H. L. Harrison, B.A., from the Diocese of Montreal; The Rev. Eric W. Jackson, B.A., from the Diocese of New Westminster; The Rev. James Brody, who has just been ordained, from Emanuel College, Saskatoon;

The Rev. R. J. Pierce, B.A., also from Emanuel College, and The Rev. A. E. Marshall, who comes highly recommended from the Diocese of Saskatchewan, to become the Principal of the Indian School at Wabasca.

The history of the Diocese of Athabasca dates back to the year 1872. The first Bishop, William Bompas, was one of the great heroes of the Indian Mission era of the Canadian Church. Originally the Diocese consisted of all Indian Missions. The only white people were a few traders and their families and for fifty years before the country was opened with immigrants the Church of England probably did more than any other church for the spiritual welfare of the population. The characteristics of the Diocese at the present are a great multitude of homesteaders scattered over hundreds of miles and there are only a few villages. There is no central capital and yet it is perfectly obvious that in years to come this country must be the home of a large agricultural population.

There are thirty-one little churches, fifteen licensed priests and two deacons. There are more than seventy places where services are being held regularly. The Indian Missionary work can best be consolidated around one central school adequately equipped by the government.

The Bishop referred to the faithful work of the Clergy carried out under difficult conditions without the enthusiasm of great numbers, and who ministered in all weather to their scattered flocks.

The greatest need of the Diocese at the present time is the development of a spirit of self-support in spite of the economic conditions existing at present. Probably there is no one thing more needed than the passing from the stage of a Missionary district, supported and ruled by the Church outside, to a Diocese indigenous to the soil, where the people realize that the Church of England belongs to them.

In conclusion, the Bishop referred to the great need for the sympathy and support of the Missionary Society of the Canadian Church in order that this great district may (and in its turn) do something for the spread of Missionaries throughout the world.
